Additional Terms

In consideration of the mutual promises below, you hereby give us all necessary consents under the Copyright Designs and Patents Act 1988 (as subsequently varied, modified or amended) to enable us to record and/or film you and you will provide us with a recording or film of your performance of the songs as directed by Decca to perform (the song once recorded being referred to as "the Recording(s)").

You agree that all copyright and similar rights in the Recording(s) shall be exclusively licensed to Decca (and this licence shall operate as a present licence of future copyright) and Decca shall have the full right to exploit the Recording(s) throughout the world in any manner whatsoever and through all media in perpetuity, without payment or liability to you or any party on your behalf.

You warrant that you have the right to enter into this agreement, that your grant of rights to Decca does not infringe any rights of third parties (including that you are not party to an exclusive recording agreement) and you indemnify us in respect of any claims that occur because these promises are breached.

You waive all so-called "moral rights" in respect of the Recording(s) throughout the world. If in any country you cannot waive any so-called "moral rights", you agree not to assert such rights.

Decca can licence our rights to others at our discretion.

You agree that you shall be credited at our discretion (subject also to space and customary restrictions) as to the type, size and placement of such credit, not in your name but solely as "Diana Ross – If The World Just Danced". Any failure of ours to accord you such credit shall not be a breach of our agreement.

You also agree that any other musicians may mime or act to my recorded performances of the Recordings.
